

Ben Davis is Executive Director of Friends of the Children – Montana, a long-term professional youth mentoring organization. Prior to launching Friends of the Children last year, Davis co-founded and served as chief research officer of Kharon, a groundbreaking research and data analytics company. Davis previously worked as a district attorney for a number of years prosecuting family violence and child abuse cases. It was during this period when he became deeply involved in volunteering his time to mentor children and work on social equity issues impacting youth and their families, which ultimately inspired his decision to lead Friends of the Children in Montana.

Davis also owns and operates a real estate investment and property management company.

Earlier in his career, he served as an advisor at the US Department of Treasury and represented the US government in a number of capacities in the Middle East region, including as the US Treasury attache in Jerusalem and as co-lead of the Iraq Threat Finance Cell in Baghdad.
