As an architect and designer at Cushing Terrell, I am dedicated to bringing creativity to every project and client. My focus and specialization has been with executive private residences, restaurants, hospitality, and resort communities. I enjoy diving in and really learning about how people live or experience a space. I always joke that by the end of the design process for a residence, I will probably know how my clients live better than they know themselves. Additionally, I have managed and worked extensively on large government projects and term contracts in both the United States and Asia. Understanding the funding mechanism, delivery process, local culture, agency requirements, and the design criteria are all challenges that make the government project type intriguing to me. I am a client advocate and problem solver, viewing each challenge as a learning experience. Besides work I can be found enjoying the Montana outdoors by fishing, hiking, or hunting with my wife and two sons.
