Born to Dennis and Patty McIntire, a lineman for a local power company and a biochemist at the University of Montana, Keegan was raised in the picturesque valley below the Mission Mountains where he graduated from St. Ignatius High School in 1999. After a year of hard work in a machine shop, he began attending the U of M in hopes of finding his path, but two years later took a management position with The Bootlegger Co's, overseeing staff and inventory for the retail shoe company at the local level. This opportunity allowed him to eventually leave the Missoula market and work at several of their locations including Jackson Hole, WY and an affiliate in Albuquerque, NM before returning to Missoula and running the day-to-day operations for several more years.

After leaving retail sales behind, Keegan began working for Edward Jones Investment, selling securities for two and-a-half years beginning in the spring of 2008. With the skills he developed in retail sales that were further honed by Investment banking he began a partnership with Rock Creek Financial to providing second chance loans to the community of Missoula. For the following 11 years of owning and operating the business he developed many friendships, community ties, and a commitment to providing opportunity and benefit to the people of western Montana.

Most recently in December of 2021. and in search of new challenges, a team working environment, and a broader product mix to provide customers, Keegan joined the First Security Bank of Missoula's Consumer Lending Department.
