

Bio – Kim Pearce

Kim Pearce was born in St. Louis, Missouri, and at the age of eight, moved with her family to Columbia Falls, Montana. Her journey into leadership began with her passion for soccer, which she pursued at the collegiate level while earning her associate's degree with a business emphasis at North Idaho College. Kim then advanced to the University of Montana, where she completed her undergraduate studies in accounting and finance.

During her early professional career, Kim excelled her skills through various internships, gaining experience in bookkeeping and payroll. Her exposure to diverse business operations sparked an interest in taxation and led her to pursue certification as a Certified Public Accountant. Recognizing a desire for greater expertise, Kim earned her Master of Taxation from the University of Denver Sturm College of Law as a nontraditional student, while balancing the demands of her career.

Today, Kim applies her tax expertise at Boyle, Deveny & Meyer PC, where she helps individuals and businesses understand the complex world of taxes. After surviving the rigors of tax season, she enjoys the flexibility that summer brings—whether that's working with clients or escaping to the great outdoors.

Outside of the office, Kim is always on the move—literally. An avid ultra-marathon runner, she tackles five races a year, fueled by her love for scenic trails and, of course, delicious post-run snacks. Whether she's running through Montana's rugged landscapes or daydreaming about her next adventure, the mountains are her happy place.

When she's not chasing finish lines, Kim can be found on the soccer field or kicking back at her off-grid cabin near Glacier National Park, enjoying the simple life with her husband and dog. From soccer tournaments to enjoying the local craft beer scene, Kim couldn't imagine living anywhere else but Missoula—a place that has given her both community and countless memories.
