I was born and raised in Missoula, MT and as the son of a carpenter, I have been involved in construction for as long as I can remember. Whether I was a laborer on small residential jobsites or managing multiple projects, I have always found construction to be a rewarding and noble profession.

I started my professional career in 2008, moving to Southern California to work for a large general contractor. In 2015 my wife and I found out we had a baby on the way decided to move back home to Montana. I soon began working for Jackson Contractor Group and have been working on projects across Missoula since.

My wife and I now have 3 girls and an old lab and couldn't be happier to be back in Missoula. Our kids are now at the age that we can really enjoy what Montana has to offer and spend our free weekends swimming at the lake, rafting, camping and fishing.
