Amy is the Chief Program Officer at The Arc Western Montana. She received her B.A. in Peace and Justice and Conflict Studies at Goshen College in Indiana. Time as a victim offender mediator and coordinating a program designed to support juvenile offenders helped her hone her skills in restorative justice and helping people find their voice. After acquiring her master's in education at Indiana University and several years teaching, she moved to Montana with her family and became the Staff Development Specialist at The Arc and accepted the role of CPO in 2021. With her husband and their two kids, Amy enjoys everything that Montana has to offer: hiking, biking, floating, and exploring!
